	I am working for El Mercurio Newspaper, the most influent media in Chile, since 1988. My relationship with science started on the same year when I published in Revista del Domingo an story about The Abalon's Hatcheries in Chile. During 1993 I won an scholarship to study at International Institute of Journalism in Berlin where I specialized on environmental issues. After that I wrote stories about biodiversity, climate change, energy and also I started to write about astronomy, archaeology and paleonthology. In 2001 I was promoted to the new section Ciencia y Tecnología were I developed all my interests related to the area and even I wrote about technology, internet and videogames. In 2004 I was selected to participate on Jack Ealy workshop about science journalism at Instituto de las Americas in San Diego, California. Email: rigariga@gmail.com
