

CHALLENGES AND OPPORTUNITIES IN COMMUNICATING SCIENCE TO THE PUBLIC WORKSHOP

IANAS Building ties with Academies and Science Journalist

CANADA	Peter Calamai
	A founding member of the Canadian Science Writers' Association in 1970, Peter Calamai served as the Toronto Star's national science reporter from 1998 to 2008. He is an adjunct research professor in the School of Journalism and Communication at Carleton University in Ottawa and a contributing editor at Cosmos, a science magazine published six times a year in Australia. He has a bachelor of science in physics from McMaster University and worked as correspondent and editor with the Southam company for 30 years. He is a three-time winner of Canada's highest print journalistic honour, the National Newspaper Award. Email: pcalamai@magma.ca
	Jeremy N. McNeil
	For more than ten years, Jeremy McNeil has been presenting slide-shows, comparing similarities in behaviour of humans and insects, to students from kindergarten to high school, in both English and French. He now speaks to more than 1,500 students annually in Canada and Europe. His activities now include talking to students and teachers taking courses on teaching science to young children, amateur science groups, gardening clubs, and visitors to nature centres. He appears regularly on radio and television, as well as serving as judge in science fairs, both nationally and internationally. Email: jmcneil2@uwo.ca

The Academies of Arts, Humanities and Sciences of Canada
www.rsc.ca

IANAS The Inter-American Network of Academies of Sciences
www.ianas.org